Politics -The Corporate Jungle—Class No. PMP1004—Atlanta

Have you wondered why that guy that knows half as much as you and works half as hard is getting ahead of you? It's POLITICS! Working hard and doing a good job is not enough. Let's explore the jungle you roam and see if we can identify how you can stake out some territory and be King of the Jungle. Half Day, 5 CDU

Managing Multiple Projects—Class No. PMP2002—Atlanta

Program, Portfolio, or Multi Projects. Call it what you want. Companies are making do with fewer people to handle more projects and tasks. From Senior Executive Portfolio directors to Executive Assistant, you all need to manage your time better. Let us ex-

White Paper On 12 steps to Better Project Charters

Not formally chartering a project maybe the most frequently repeated mistake organizations make when beginning projects. Root cause analysis of project failures often identifies poor vision and lack of a charter as the reason projects go awry.

IT Project Manager (PMP) Wanted— Washington DC Area

Job Description:

The search continues for this position. Thank you if you already sent me a resume. The candidate will serve as project manager on multiple projects. Primary focus of the projects will be from a systems perspective rather than functional business application standpoint. 6 Months, $60/hour—Contact me ASAP about this opportunity!

Required Skills

- 5-7 years project management experience effectively managing technology projects in application development and infrastructure.
- Experience in Windows and UNIX environments, networking, J2EE and WebLogic application servers.
- 5 years project management experience managing multiple projects simultaneously. Experience must include projects comprised of weak and balanced matrix team members who did not directly report you.
- 5 years experience using an established project management methodology including managing standard deliverables, risks, issues and escalation.
- Provide 10 years of work experience demonstrating strong problem solving skills.
